
NATURE SPIRITS

– Monika Muranyi

The Earth is more alive than you think. In the deepest parts of the oceans, there is life. In the depths of the Earth where volcanoes are born, there is life. Even the air we breathe has the attribute of life. Those who are sensitive to energy feel this life within the Earth as Nature's Spirit, or elementals. Nature Spirits or elementals are also known as fairies, elves, pixies and devas. But are they real? If so, why are they here? The answer is, "Yes they are real, and they are here for you!"

In general, elementals are thought to be beings or spirits that inhabit nature, including the four elements – earth, air, fire and water. Elementals are also referred to, or known by other names, such as devas, fairies, elves, pixies, gnomes, sprites, brownies, leprechauns, Earth angels, Nature Spirits and others. Regardless of the name, all of these beings are multi-dimensional energies that are the helpers of planet Earth – Gaia, and they are in service to humanity.

There are many humans who have the ability to communicate with these multi-dimensional energies. Perhaps you are one of them? Those who relate their experiences often describe what they see, however I wish to review this process. Think of all the wonderful images and artist impressions of fairies and elves and all the other things that fit into this category. If elementals are multi-dimensional energy, how can the communication become enhanced? In what form would these energies present themselves that would allow us to connect with them?

The consciousness of the multi-dimensional elementals understands Human psychology. Therefore they wish to appear as something cute, small, non-threatening. They want to look very sweet and innocent, so they can strike a chord within us and banish any fears. It is very similar to the way that we represent what angels look like. We create angels in the image of a Human and stick a pair of wings on them. Human angels with wings are much easier to understand and communicate with than a blazing ball of intense light and energy. This is why multi-dimensional energy that is here to help humanity presents itself to us in a way that we can relate to and not be afraid. This may also help explain why each culture has their own version of what elementals look like. In fact, sometimes a group of people can experience them and each person has a different description of what they “saw!”

According to Kryon, an entity channelled by Lee Carroll, there is going to be an eventual awakening of the masters of life in the ground and in the air, which many humans have seen and known as the energy of Gaia (elementals). Elementals are always compassionate and represent a loving consciousness that we can count on. These are elementals that have been imbued in the Earth, just waiting for this release. This release has been dependent on a potential shift in Human consciousness ... one that just occurred. In 2012 humanity passed a marker, one which was prophesied by the indigenous from thousands of years ago. It is also the basis for the calendar of the Maya (the long count). Passing this marker was the signal for a rebirth for Earth and humanity, initiating the emergence of new energies and new consciousness.

Kryon has said that these elementals have always been there and we have seen them on and off for centuries. They often represent the core of mythology, and books are filled with stories of seeing them. But now is the time for the multi-dimensional energies of the elementals to be released and flow from the Earth in a way that many more can often see and feel. Kryon says they will take their place on the grids of Gaia where they belong, and enhance Human consciousness. Some have even called this the return of the masters. They have always been a part of Gaia, helping us to see Mother Earth and feel her love for humanity.

and DNA). Many of the indigenous perceive this as a reawakening of the ancestors. It represents energies of divinity, which have been there for a very long time waiting for the shift.

The role of elementals is important to help humanity reconnect with Gaia. Why is this important? As humanity begins to become aware of Gaia's life-force and consciousness, it means that the planet Earth will begin to matter in a way it hasn't before. It will bring about new attitudes and solutions to some of our current environmental problems. The way we treat animals will also change, so that they are given respect, honour and love. All this is a return to the way of the Ancients and their wisdom, which many of us have lost along the way.

Perhaps the next time you see an image of an elemental, or you feel their presence in Mother Nature you may wish to say, "Thank you." Then pause for a moment so that you can hear them say, "It is we who thank you, dear Human Being, for being the change we have waited for."

Metaphorically they seem to appear in groups of threes and fours, which is a symbolic for the fact that nature is base-twelve (just like physics, the universe
